The Stars Say—

For Thursday, June 25

A n auspicious, lively and promising day is the augury based upon several favorable lunar and mutual configurations. There is excellent promise of favors, honors, promotion or increase of salary for those in employment, and in a general way personal popularity and distinction is assumed. New projects are under fair prospects, with the energies, initiative and faculties under high stimulus. It is probable that females may have favors or assistance from elderly persons or institutions.

Those whose birthday it is are under excellent auspices for promotion, preferment or honors, especially in employment. New projects also should flourish under the fine spur to initiative and energetic attack incited by fortunate planetary influences. Personal popularity and favoritism may be relied upon. A child born should be resourceful, energetic, aggressive and popular and should rise to good position in employment and also the favoritism of elders.

President Arthur E. Morgan, upon whom the burden of raising the annual deficit has largely rested, is to take several months leave of absence, and the action of the faculty and employees was due to their desire to free him from anxiety concerning college finances during his vacation.

NEW quiet SECOND GEAR GIVES A new KIND OF ACCELERATION

SWIFT • SMOOTH • QUIET

You can't appreciate how much a really quiet second gear adds to driving enjoyment until you take the wheel and try the new Oldsmobile. For this feature, one of many important new ones now offered in Oldsmobile, gives a new kind of acceleration. It is unusually swift, to give you the lead in traffic. It is remarkably smooth, to give added zest to fast getaway. And it is almost unbelievably noise-free—actually rivaling high-gear performance in quietness. These unusual advantages of Oldsmobile's new Quiet Second Gear are given the highest possible degree of utility by the famous Syncro-Mesh transmission. This feature enables you to shift smoothly and easily through all gears without clashing. And this applies not only to the shifts from low into second and from second to high, but also to the change from high back to second. This shift... so difficult with the ordinary transmission, and so useful for a quick burst of speed in traffic... can be made easily and silently, without reducing car speed. The new Oldsmobile is a great car to drive for many reasons. And not the least of these is its new Quiet Second Gear—transforming Oldsmobile's smooth, increased power into keen, fast, quiet acceleration... and contributing new pleasure—new satisfaction—to driving.

The Official Food Bulletin, published by the U. S. Food administration in Ohio during a six-month period of the World war is a record in possession of W. E. Landes, one of Marion's oldest restaurateurs, who recalls the hardships worked on the restaurant business when the entire country was being conservatively to make food available for the armies and the allies in Europe.

In contrast to the present overabundance of wheat and an abundance of sugar are the sacrifices made by Americans to make these foods available for the soldiers.

Interesting orders in the food bulletin include general order No. 2 which said "No public eating-place shall serve or permit to be served bread or toast as a garniture or under meat."

"This order alone," says Landes, "made it impossible to serve creamed beef on toast or any similar dish."

Other orders limited a half ounce of butter to each person at each meal in a restaurant, and barred the use of sugar bowls on the lunch counter or table. One teaspoon full of sugar was the legal limit any person could have at one meal for all purposes. Coffee, Landes remembers, wasn't so sweet in those days.

Also, it was unlawful to serve bread or other bakery products which did not contain at least 20 per cent of wheat flour substitutes. Inspectors went around to restaurants periodically to see that these orders were obeyed. Failure to comply with the orders made the restaurant owner liable to prosecution.

LONDON—The Prince of Wales usually writes his own speeches on a portable typewriter in his study. Details as to his technique, whether he uses two fingers or the touch system, are yet to be ascertained.

NEW YORK—Some details of the income of Robert L. Ripley, cartoonist, have been revealed in a contract suit by a lecture bureau. He testified he had earned from $5,000 to $6,000 a week by his cartoons. The bureau set forth that at the same time he made $3,500 to $4,000 in the movies, $3,000 in vaudeville and $1,000 a week on the air.

hundreds of other books, handbooks, pamphlets, besides several weekly and monthly magazines.

Covering merit badges alone there are over 100 pamphlets to guide the scouts in their pursuit of scouting honors. These pamphlets cover every conceivable phase of activity, from bee raising to electrical engineering. In most Scout offices there is a service library for the guidance of Scoutmasters and Scouts in improving their meetings, and also to enable them to understand the work they are doing and what it really means to them. This library numbers almost fifty pamphlets on such subjects as model airplanes, pets, canoeing, totem poles, and many others. An editorial board composed of such men as Dr. Henry Van Dyke, Dr. John H. Finley and three others govern the publication of these pamphlets.

The handbook on canoeing is considered one of the most complete volumes on this subject yet published. It covers every phase of the canoe, from building one to winning races with one. This pamphlet also gives the history of the canoe, and tells of its relations to the Eskimo and the early American Indian.

puppies in a tree, she left behind a second litter of five tiny ones in a cold barn. Mary, the cat, had just lost three kittens; so, with true mother instinct, she found her way to the abandoned pups and nursed them until help came from the household.

Daily Proverb—"Spend not when you may save, spare not when you must spend."

From London comes the announcement that there will be programs and no "cutting in"
at Queen Mary's dance party next month.
How quaint!

Two bandits held up a hotel on Michigan avenue in Chicago and made off with $50 in cash and a 500-pound safe containing the valuables of the hotel's guests. They probably didn't want the hotel.

Out in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a justice of the peace has officiated in 4,000 wedding ceremonies during the last twenty years. The cumulative responsibility of that justice must be simply staggering.

"Vladivostok—a City Where Men Die of Hunger" is the headline over an American newspaper writer's story of the horrors he saw there. Who would imagine it possible in the "earthly paradise" where "liberty and equality" is the rule?

Frans Krukenberg's propeller-driven "rail Zeppelin" in a recent test covered the 178 miles between Hamburg and Berlin at an average speed of 106.31 miles an hour and established at a favorable point a new world rail record speed of 143.73 miles an hour, with a gasoline consumption of 3 1/2 miles to the gallon. Looks a lot like a prophecy of what the future motive power of the railroads is to be.

John D. Rockefeller has sent his check for $1,000,000 to the California state park commission with which to buy additional land for park purpose, and just as likely as not the commission will proceed to negotiate for purchases without waiting to see if the check's good.

Federal treasury officials estimate that the government debt on the last day of this month will be $16,800,000,000, an increase of $620,000, 000 over the figure of a year ago. Well, it could hardly have been expected that there would be continued reduction in the face of the excessive generosity manifested by our federal lawmakers during the present fiscal year.
Political fence building certainly comes mighty high.

Clay Deposits as Rain Gauges.
Halbert F. Gillette, civil engineer of San Marino, California, and a former professor of Columbia university, told the Pasadena gathering of the American Association for the Advancement of Science to look to the planets for the key to rainfall. When they turn their gazing guns to the sun and the earth, he said, down comes the deluge. He explained that the term, gazing guns, was used figuratively for the axes of the planets' magnetic fields.

The Gillette theory is that it is not sunspots which cause the wet cycles on one planet, but that both the sunspots and our heavy rainfalls are the result of planetary conditions, and in support of this view the former Columbia professor cited that the planetary magnetic cycles line up perfectly with the records of the clay deposits, or varves, in geological formations. The thickness of these deposits indicates the amount of clay deposited from year to year, which in turn testifies to the relative amount of rainfall on the drainage surface from which they are washed. In a word, he holds that these deposits by their varying thickness tell of the rainfall each year just as do the rings of a tree, the thick deposits indicating years of heavy rains and the thin deposits dry years.

As rainfall records for hundreds of years back can be traced by observing the rings on the giant sequoias of California which have fallen, so can the rainfall for thousands of years be traced by the clay varves in the oil shales of Colorado, which give a rain gauge record back for 300,000 years.

Were there a chance that we of today might live to be Methuselahs, a portion of Mr. Gillette's address would certainly prove disconcerting. Citing that the greatest supercycle of all, which he believes was the ice age cycle, is of 21,500 years, he suggested that there might be another ice age on the earth in something like 10,000. A sub-cycle of this is a period of 1,774 years, he said, which fits in very well with the historic record of great floods in 450 B. C. and 1350 A. D. If this is correct, the sub-cycle of maximum rainfall will not be due until about the year 3124, which will mean that the dry maximum will not be reached before the half-way period between 1350 and 3124 which will be about the year 2237. In other words, the maximum dry period is yet about 300 years away, and that point will have to be passed before relief from dryness for a long period of time can be anticipated.

If this San Marino scientist is correct in his view, those who come after us for the next five or six centuries are going to have a real job on their hands meeting the problem of drought relief.

Enlightened Selfishness.

Wide support of President Hoover's proffer of a debt truce of one year to give European debtors a breathing spell reaffirms this nation's attitude of world friendliness. Like all friendliness, it bears traces of selfishness, but it is at least enlightened selfishness. A quotation from Owen D. Young, whose judgment enjoys the respect of his countrymen, may be of assistance to some who do not comprehend the proper relationship of friendliness and selfishness in the United States' attitude. Mr.
Young says:

"Economic integration of the world is a necessary prerequisite to effective political cooperation in the world. America, as the greatest creditor nation, is more interested than any other in economic integration. It is inevitable that from an economic point of view she take an interest in and should be concerned in the material problems and affairs of every country on the globe. Isolation to America, either economic or political, is impossible."

Attempts to impugn the motives of President Hoover and his advisers in proposing a year's suspension of all inter-governmental payments of war debts and reparations are unworthy.
The proposal is not an attempt to mix in affairs in which this country has no proper interest, but a frank attempt to place the United States in an advantageous position in a fiscal tangle from which there is no escaping.
America has extended credit to Europe so generously that it is obliged to act as health adviser as well as collector. A creditor can afford to be harsh and haughty to a debtor who owes $100. When a debtor owes many millions, however, the situation is reversed. He has his creditor in his power.

Owen D. Young, who drew the Young plan by which the United States sought to keep its European creditors solvent, indorses President Hoover's proposed debt truce. Charles G.
Dawes, author of the Dawes plan to assist German finances, indorses it. Reed Smoot, chairman of the senate finance committee, indorses it.
Senator Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, believes it is sound.
There are many others having similar influence who have indorsed the proposal. They know, all theory laid aside, that emergency action is necessary to protect this nation's interest in European finances. The President's proposal of a debt truce is that emergency action.

Five hijackers held up a Michigan truck garden on the outskirts of Chicago and made off with his truck and its load of strawberries valued at $400. Evidently all Chicago's "public enemies" have not departed from that city for crime pastures new.

Compassion.

Natives of Batanga in the Cameroon country, West Africa, read a story telling of conditions in the United States. Thousands of Americans were starving, they learned, while compassion welled up in their hearts. Thousands more had insufficient clothing, and thinking in terms of their own scanty raiment, they sensed calamitous conditions in the country which had sent missionaries to help them.

So the natives of Batanga took up a collection to help the starving, unclothed thousands in the United States. The money—$347—properly transmitted in a letter of credit—arrived a few days ago and was turned over to the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian Church of America.

It was the first time the Presbyterian church ever had received money from abroad for the aid of American natives, though it had sent many missionaries letters of credit to various lands for the aid of other natives. Nevertheless, it accepted the aid gratefully, respecting the spirit in which it was offered.

One's first impulse is to put it down as a ludicrous incident and forget it. But that would imply one of two things: that America needed no help, or that it was in such bad shape that $347 couldn't do any good. And the natives of Batanga would have their feelings hurt if they ever found out. For their sake, then, why not acknowledge its receipt with the cheering information that the money has been used and that America is now in tip-top shape? It's probably bad enough for the Batanga natives to worry about things here without being told that $347 doesn't help much.

In his recently-published memoirs, the late Bernhard, Prince von Buelow, sets out as of the date of July 25, 1914, that to stop the war it would have been sufficient to declare at Vienna that we would in no case authorize the rupture of relations between Austria and Serbia. . . . We should have proposed at the same time to submit the points still in dispute to the tribunal of arbitration at The Hague. Little wonder that the memoirs have been likened to "a bomb from the grave!"

The Florida state senate has passed a bill providing for an eight-cent gas tax. One of these days some state legislatures may wake up and discover that they have killed the goose which has been providing the tax-eaters with golden eggs.

In a word, as France and Belgium pay out only about forty per cent. of the reparations payments they receive from Germany, they want to know more about President Hoover's proposal and how it will work before committing themselves, which is just what might have been expected from France, and, for that matter, Belgium as well.

Dr. Charles Kipfer, who was the companion of Professor Auguste Picard when they made an altitude record of approximately ten miles, says it wouldn't surprise him should somebody make a flight in a rocket-driven plane to the moon. It certainly would throw a surprise into us, but then, we've never gone ten miles on the 238,800-mile gap between our earth and its satellite.

Mrs. Julia Lowther, the Ashtabula housemaid, having been sentenced to die in the electric chair early in October for shooting and killing Mrs. Clara Smith who was an impediment in the way of the lust affair between the killer and her victim's husband, we may now expect the sob sisters to get busy looking to a commutation of the death sentence. When all is said, why should not a murderess pay the penalty just as would a killer of the other sex?

Editorial Opinion.

WAGES ON THE RAILROAD.

Included in the protests against permitting the railroads to increase the freight rates fifteen per cent. is the suggestion that they might save money by negotiating new wage agreements. The railroads evidently anticipated that this suggestion would be made.
In their petition they devote considerable space to the question of wages. Their presentation of the matter is illuminating for those who may regard wage reduction as one of the steps properly to be taken at this time in order to avoid increasing the charges for transportation. There are two reasons set forth in behalf of the railroads in favor of leaving wages as they are. One is that it has been the established policy of the administration and business leaders that wage rates should be maintained during the business depression. The other reason relates to practical difficulties in bringing about reductions.

It has recently been made plain that they are differing opinions as to the wisdom of the policy of wage maintenance. In addition, if its wisdom be granted there is fear that the policy can not be maintained if the depression is not soon over. This fear may be reflected in a qualifying clause in the railroad's statement of the case when they say that the policy of wage maintenance is one to which the federal government and most leading industries are committed "for the time being at least."

It is a finding of fact by a commission named by the President. In theory, at least,
such a finding would not affect public opinion
that neither the railroads nor the employees
would dare to take action leading to an interruption of transportation by strike or lock-
out. It is not unreasonable to assume that were the railroads now to inaugurate effort to reduce wages the proceedings would pass through the stages of conference and mediation
and resort would be had to one of the alternatives. A finding of fact by a commission named by the President. In theory, at least,
such a finding would not affect public opinion
that neither the railroads nor the employees
would dare to take action leading to an interruption of transportation by strike or lock-
out. It is not unreasonable to assume that
were the railroads now to inaugurate effort to
reduce wages the proceedings would pass through the stages of conference and mediation
and resort would be had to one of the alternatives.

This state of things they explain presumably for the benefit of the public more than of the interstate commerce commission which already knows all about it. The public is reminded that under federal law in an attempt to reduce wages it would be necessary first to hold conferences with the representatives of railway labor. If the conferences did not reach agreement, resort would then be had to boards of mediation. If mediation failed there would follow arbitration, or, if either side refused to mediate, a finding of fact by a commission
named by the President. In theory, at least,
such a finding would not affect public opinion
that neither the railroads nor the employees
would dare to take action leading to an interruption of transportation by strike or lock-
out. It is not unreasonable to assume that
were the railroads now to inaugurate effort to
reduce wages the proceedings would pass through the stages of conference and mediation
and resort would be had to one of the alternatives.

The railroads have thus made their answer to the claim that they should seek relief in their troubles through the establishment of lower wages. So far as they are concerned there will be no attack upon existing scales
"for the time being at least," and, probably, not for a long time to come if the business depression ends and railroad traffic is increased in volume.—Boston Transcript.

"OFFICIALS, RACKETEERS, GANGSTERS." Detroit advances a step in the unpleasant, but necessary, task of cleaning up civic corruption. A grand jury, which has been sitting for more than ten months indicting fifty persons, including a police inspector and a lieutenant.
The rest, whose names are not yet revealed,
are described as "mostly public officials, racketeers and gangsters."

"Public officials, racketeers and gangsters." Here is a text for many a timely sermon on the familiar odorous alliance of politics and crime. Many a city besides Detroit has suffered from this situation and will continue to suffer unless the civic responsibility of its law-abiding citizens is aroused and kept aroused.
It is the combination of that gave Chicago over to the gang domination from which the city on Lake Michigan seems to be showing signs of escape. It has been familiar in New York.
Cleveland has no reason to adopt a superior attitude, at least until the whole story of the Potter case has been told.

It is to Detroit's credit that she has taken arms against such civic enemies. In the course of a long drawn out grand jury investigation public interest lags and righteous public anger sometimes cools. Detroit has seemingly stuck to it. Her final test will come in the measures she takes to correct the evils this grand jury has laboriously uncovered.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"Tetany" and Ductless Glands.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
Recently I discussed a disease spoken of as "Tetanus." Because of the similarity in names, it is often confused by the lay public with tetanus or lockjaw.
Tetany differs from tetanus in that it is not a disease resulting from an infection. It is due to a failure in the proper absorption of lime by the body. This chemical breakdown is due, undoubtedly, to a disturbance in the operation of one of those mysterious ductless glands. In this case it is the "parathyroid gland."
The parathyroid glands are tiny masses of tissue found in close contact with the thyroid gland. The latter is associated with the "Adam's apple," in the front of the neck.
The chief signs of the disease are spasms in the muscles, tremblings and convulsive-like symptoms affecting mainly the hands and feet. It may follow typhoid fever, severe diarrhoea, exposure to cold or rickets.
If the parathyroid glands are removed from a living body this condition will result. It can be produced by any poison that interferes with the human chemistry.
The disease is most frequently seen in children, chiefly those who have rickets. It is most to be expected in severe digestive disorders in bottled infants.
Sometimes there is a spasm of the muscles, especially of the arms. This spasm causes the arm to become bent across the chest. The legs become extended, with bending upward of the toes. The muscles of the face are rarely affected. If they are, there is trembling and tremors of the face and a change in the facial expression.
The disease is not a fatal one and recovery takes place within a short period. It is essential to remove the cause. In children the whole problem is usually a question of diet. When there is a recovery is prompt.
Baths and cold sponging often relieve the muscular spasms. But it is better that no treatment should be attempted until it is directed by a physician. At times these cases are stubborn and require careful prescribing.
ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

A.—This is usually indicative of an intestinal condition. Watch your diet, avoiding rich foods, and be sure to keep the system clear.

Sir Edgeworth David.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.
The recent airplane flight of Admiral Byrd and his companion over the South pole has tended, for the time being, to cause us to forget some of the notable exploratory feats in the Antarctic which preceded Admiral Byrd's feat. One of the most notable of these was reaching the South magnetic pole, the accomplishment, primarily, of Sir Edgeworth David, a Welshman, who, in nearly forty years has occupied the chair of geology at Sydney university, New South Wales.
The magnetic poles, as one authority has stated, are not fixed spots on the earth's surface, but are constantly traveling onward, executing an unknown path and apparently completing a circle in a period of many hundreds of years. In addition to this onward movement of a few miles a year, there is a lesser oscillation. Exactly a century ago Sir James Clarke Ross reached the North magnetic pole, and ten years later made the first observations concerning the exact position of the magnetic pole in the southern hemisphere. He attempted the hope that a British ship might complete the work which he had begun. It was Professor David's ambition, not to calculate the position of the south magnetic pole in a given year, but actually to attain this geographical point on the earth's surface.
In 1908 he accepted the invitation of Sir Ernest Shackleton to accompany his new expedition to the Antarctic in the Nimrod as scientific expert and adviser on the spot, at the Great ice barrier, before returning to Australia.
The voyage began on New Year's day, 1908.
From Christchurch, New Zealand, the small ship, with two hundred tons often rolling at an angle of fifty degrees. Throughout this grilling experience Professor David was ever the optimist, exchanging the severest manual labor with the calm drafting of meteorological reports.
So fascinated was Professor David by the magic southland that he determined to remain.
His decision was greeted with jubilation by the members of the expedition. A first notable achievement was the climbing of Mount Erebus, a great mountain more than 13,000 feet in altitude, standing like a giant sentinell at the gateway of the Great ice barrier. This peak had never been climbed by any human being.
Its height had been variously estimated by Ross and Scott as ranging from 12,367 to 13,120 feet. Mount Erebus is an extinct volcano, and at the top an immense depression marks the site of an old crater. The climbing party consisted of Professor David, Douglas Mawson, then but twenty-eight, and a scientist, Dr.
Forbes Mackay by name, with a supporting party of three. They reached the summit in five days, encountering terrific weather. Professor David accurately found the height of the main crater to be 11,350 feet above sea level, and the height of the summit of Mount Erebus to be 13,120 feet.
The major achievement of the Antarctic expedition was the attainment of the South magnetic pole. Professor David was accompanied by Mawson and Mackay, as on the climb of Mount Erebus, the party setting off on October 5, 1908. During the entire journey, during which they covered over 1,260 miles without any assistance of any kind, each man had to haul a load of 240 pounds. They reached the site of the South magnetic pole, in latitude seventy-two degrees twenty-five minutes south longitude, 155 degrees sixteen minutes east, on January 16, 1909. As the breeze, Professor David uttered the historic words: "I hereby take possession of this area containing the magnetic pole for the British empire."—Copy-

Assassination of Garfield.

BY J. H. GALBRAITH.
Those who are old enough to remember the assassination of President Garfield, and were able to comprehend the seriousness of the tragedy at the time, must realize that they are getting along in years. July 2 will be the fiftieth anniversary of that event. Ohio was naturally much interested in the Garfield administration. He had gone to the Republican national convention in Chicago in 1880 as an national convention of John Sherman for the presidential nomination. The "Third-Term-Grant" supporters denounced the convention between the avowed candidates, and a switch to Garfield against his protest that he was for Sherman, solved the problem, and he was nominated.

Within a few weeks after his inauguration
the new president fell into a dispute with T.
C. Platt and Roscoe Conkling, senators from New York, over New York patronage. There was a particularly hard fight in the senate over the confirmation of President Garfield's appointment for collector of the port of New York. Both these senators resigned, and the intense factional controversy engendered prompted a weak-minded man, Charles J.
David, to take President Garfield's life.
On July 2, 1881, as the President was passing through the railway station in Washington, accompanied by his secretary of state, James G.
Blaine, to leave the capital on his first vacation, Garfield was shot.

For fifteen days the President lingered between life and death. It was extremely warm in Washington and late in August, his physicians decided that their patient must have the benefit of cooler air, so on September 6 he was taken by train to Elberon, New Jersey, where thirteen days later he died.
Garfield was arrested on the spot, tried in Washington, and hung June 30, 1882.

Just Outside Our Door.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.
People who think of democracy as a comparatively recent sociological phenomenon will be amazed to find the most democratic form of government among the Seri Indians, verifi-ably children of the Stone Age.
These wild and uncultured folk call all the members of their tribe together whenever there is a general question to be decided upon or a tribal chief elected. All men and women over twenty years of age have the privilege of expressing their opinion and the majority carries the day and the issue. There is never any dispute.

Until the beginning of the present century, the Seri were governed by a council of the elder women of the tribe. It was called a matrilineate, but today males also have a vote in the tribal affairs. However, each clan still is ruled by a clan-mother, the women of the family inherit property of the deceased and,
after a wedding, the husband goes to the home of the wife instead of vice versa.

Divorce is simple, won by the mere declaration by both interested parties that they are through living together and the granting of permission by the tribe. The Seri have a high moral standing—crimes among them are rare. The more serious offenses—murder and the like—are punished by banishment from tribal island. Any one caught giving aid or shelter to an expelled party is banished in turn.

Face-painting is only indulged in by the women of the Seri. The figures represented are generally the symbol of the clan, such as a pelican or a butterfly.
During the centuries through which the Seri have lived on their island and barren desert land a fierce hatred of all outsiders has been engendered in their breasts.

Mexican authorities claim that the invaders
—are eaten by this fierce and warlike people.
The Seri fight—as they hunt—principally with the long bow. This is handy up to three hundred yards and has aided this strange tribe living in Mexico within a couple of hundred miles of the American border, in keeping out strangers.

No welcome sign is hung out by this strange and mysterious race of Stone age men and women. They neither want our wares, our friendship nor our civilization.

Dinner Stories.
"I read every word of your last speech."
"Every word of it?" inquired Senator Sorghum.

"Every syllable."
"Hm. Are you a compositor or a proofreader?"

"The movies made Hobson rich."
"Why, I thought he made dishwashers."
"He does. Women buy his machines so they can clean up and get to the movies sooner."

"Where are you going this summer?"
"Oh, somewhere close to the heart of nature, where motoring is good, the hotel strictly modern and the train service perfectly reliable."

CHAPTER 21

Late Callers

When Martin Beris came home from the bank that evening it was apparent even to his indifferent powers of observation that something was in a state of unusual excitement very unusual in his serene nature.

When his father appeared in the doorway between the hall and the room she was on her feet, and trembling, her sewing in her hands, gazing with all eyes toward the hall as if waiting the coming of some great apparition.

"Why, Ann! What's the matter, are you sick?"

She shook her head. "Pierre! Where is Pierre? Have you seen him?"

"I have been at the bank all the evening working on my books."

"Oh, where is he? Why doesn't he come home?" she moaned, pacing the floor while Martin watched in blank amazement.

"What in the world has happened?"

She did not answer but went to the window and tried to see out into the night.

"Is anything wrong with Pierre?" she turned from the window and summed her nervous movements.

"The room," she said, "I've worried until I'm almost crazy."

"But what's the trouble? Can't you tell me what has happened?"

She whirled on him suddenly, with an outburst which startled him. "I know well enough. Bruce has taken Pierre's school money. It's the meanest, wickedest thing I ever heard of and you are just as bad as Bruce. Just because he is so anxious to make us happy, because he loves us so, you two beasts have hounded him into wrecking his own life as if he didn't matter at all. You've broken his heart—you've driven him mad—that's what you have done!"

"Nonsense!" said Martin sharply. "Of course it's nonsense to you—everything but money is nonsense to people like you and Bruce. How could you two money worshippers understand a great soul like Pierre Donovan? Pierre is not like common people; he is a genius; he is an artist. You and Bruce have taken from him something that means more to him than life itself. You have driven him nearly insane. I tell you. In the state of mind he is in now he is liable to do anything—kill himself or somebody else."

"Crazy!" cried Martin. "Booh! The boy has done the most sensible thing he ever did in all his life. He may or may not be the artist you think he is, but when it comes to business, Pierre Donovan is just a natural-born darned fool. If ever anybody needed some honest, competent business man like Bruce to take care of his money for him, he does I guess when the returns from that mine come rolling in, and Pierre won't feel so bad about it."

A knock at the front door prevented Ann's reply. Martin looked at her, expecting her to go to the door. She started but paused and turned back. "You go, Pa. I'm afraid."

Martin gazed at her stupidly. "Afraid of what?"

"Pierre—something has happened to him."

The knock came again. "Oh, why don't you go?" cried Ann, stamping her foot in an agony of suspense. Martin went into the hall. Ann waited, wringing her hands in nervous apprehension.

Martin's voice was heard: "Hello. Tony, what the deuce brings you out this time of night?"

"Father Tony!" cried Ann, running to meet him. "Is it anything about Pierre? Where is he?"

"I—I was so worried I could not sleep," the old actor answered. "Hasn't Pierre come home yet?"

"What were you worried about?" asked Martin.

"Really, Martin, I fear you will laugh at me, but I don't know exactly I seemed to feel Harriet very near. I felt that the boy was in trouble. I couldn't sleep—I retired early, you know, so I got up thinking I would walk in the fresh air. Then I—I saw him."

"Pierre?" cried Ann. "You saw Pierre, Father Tony?"

The old man nodded, unable for the moment to reply.

"Where was he, Tony?" asked Martin.

The old actor answered as if he himself doubted the truth of what he said. "Down town, near the bank," he paused.

"Well, go on," said Martin.

"Yes, yes, Martin. I went to the drug store first. Then I thought I would come up here just to see if he was home and all right. I walked around the square and just as I turned around the corner into Elm Street I met him—right near the bank. I spoke to him; called him by name, and—he turned and ran! Really, I don't know what to think. Has anything happened to you know?"

"Enough has happened," Ann answered. "Bruce has Pierre's school money."

"I was afraid of that," returned Old Tony. "I could see Bruce was going to make a last effort to persuade him." He turned on Martin with sudden fury. "And you, too, Martin Beris—You and your precious son-in-law shall suffer for this! If there is a God in heaven, you filthy money-buzzards shall answer for what you have done to Harriet Noel's son."

They were too shocked by the old actor's vehemence to speak. Then Ann caught sight of Pierre in the hall. He had entered quietly and was on his way upstairs. "Pierre!" she cried wildly. "The young man paused, regarded them silently and his face was terrible to see."

Ann spoke timidly: "Won't you come in, Pierre? Father Tony is here."

Pierre took a step into the room. Still he did not speak but only looked at them.

Ann turned her face away to hide her tears. Martin stared and drew back fearfully.

At last Pierre said harshly to Tony: "What are you doing here?"

The old actor answered gently. "I came to see you, Pierre."

"Well, you've seen me—now go on home."

"But, Pierre—"

"Go home," said Pierre. "I don't want to see you or anybody. I'm all right—you don't need to worry about me. I'm going to bed." But he made no move toward leaving the room—only stood there.

Old Tony turned appealingly to Ann.

"I would go to bed if I were you, dear," said Ann, trying to speak in a matter-of-fact way. "It must be quite late. Bruce will be back in the morning and everything will be all right then."

"That reminds me," said Martin. In his bustling way, "Bruce gave me a letter for you, Ann, just as he was leaving—forgot to give it to you himself, I guess."

Ann read the letter. She gave a little cry, her face white and horror-stricken. Pierre started forward.

"Well, what's the matter now?" said Martin impatiently.

She made a hasty effort to smile, and slowly shook her head. Methodically she replaced the letter in the envelope and put it in the pocket of her apron. Then, suddenly, she burst into tears.

Pierre ran to her. "Ann, Ann, what is it, dear?" When she could not answer he put his arm about her and tried to comfort her with low murmured words as one might soothe a crying child.

The two men could only gaze wonderingly at Ann and Pierre and at each other.

A loud knocking at the front door echoed through the house. They gave no heed. The imperative demand was repeated and Ann, still crying, motioned her father to the door.

Martin went into the hall. Voices were heard and the old bookkeeper reappeared with four men.

For a long moment the men stood just inside the room looking at Ann, who was making a desperate effort to control her grief; at Pierre, who was supporting Ann; at Tony, who timidly withdrew into a far corner; and at Martin, who in great confusion was placing chairs for the unexpected visitors.

Sit down, Mr. Dayton—Mr. Watson— the bookkeeper was so addressed as a school boy, "Harriet! Sit down, have a chair—Scott, sit over here."

"Pierre—something has happened to him."

The knock came again. "Oh, why don't you go?" cried Ann, stamping her foot in an agony of suspense. Martin went into the hall. Ann waited, wringing her hands in nervous apprehension.

Martin's voice was heard: "Hello. Tony, what the deuce brings you out this time of night?"

"Father Tony!" cried Ann, running to meet him. "Is it anything about Pierre? Where is he?"

"I—I was so worried I could not sleep," the old actor answered. "Hasn't Pierre come home yet?"

"What were you worried about?" asked Martin.

"Really, Martin, I fear you will laugh at me, but I don't know exactly I seemed to feel Harriet very near. I felt that the boy was in trouble. I couldn't sleep—I retired early, you know, so I got up thinking I would walk in the fresh air. Then I—I saw him."

"Pierre?" cried Ann. "You saw Pierre, Father Tony?"

The old man nodded, unable for the moment to reply.

"Where was he, Tony?" asked Martin.

The old actor answered as if he himself doubted the truth of what he said. "Down town, near the bank," he paused.

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Humorous Boyhood Adventure

By JUDD MORTIMER LEWIS

THE bunch is sore ever since the circus was here and they ran away over to Red's to see the hen house the leopard was in and didn't get to see my grandfather kill it. My grandfather skunk it and he is having it skinned for a rug to his room, but my mother says she thinks it would make a lovely coat, so maybe my grandfather won't have a rug after all. There are lots of things a fella wants but don't get.

My grandfather's picture was in the paper this morning with the soldier suit on that he won the war with, and with the leopard hanging by his side from the limb of our tree. We all tried to get in the picture, but we didn't show in the paper. My grandfather was wearing his soldier suit again today, because a lot of people were coming to hear him tell how he did it, and to look at the skunk leopard. Some of them were there on their way to work when I let Jubilee down. My grandfather has told about it a hundred times, and he said that I was so brave that I drove the cows out so the leopard wouldn't kill them, and that he knew when I came in and told them about it being there that I knew what I was talking about, and that if he didn't want someone killed it was up to him to get busy.

He told them that he had faced death so many times that one more time didn't matter, and anyhow he was old and no one would miss him much and he had to do something right away because the neighborhood was full of children. I put my arms around him and said that I would miss him, and a lady wiped her eyes and blowed her nose and patted me on the head and gave me a paper dollar, and my grandfather blowed his nose and gave me another so now I have got two and a quarter for the Fourth and I was lucky the leopard got away.

Red's father, which is a huckster, got his doctor bill paid, and got enough money to buy another flock of chickens, and an automobile truck to do his huckstering from, and when he sells his horse he will have the money he gets for that too. So it looks like everybody but the leopard was lucky. I would hate to have been him and lose my job in the circus and get killed too.

My aunt interrupted my grandfather when we were eating breakfast and said if he had known that leopard was in the barn he would of been up on top of the house hollering for help. She said he went out to what he thought was an empty barn to get a little cheap notoriety and found that the leopard had jumped on a pitchfork and killed itself and he had then shot it in the neck and made a hero out of himself. I tried to tell her she was mistaken but she told me little boys was supposed to be seen and not heard. My grandfather just laughed and wriggled his whiskers and told her she was jealous, and that made her so mad I bet she was.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Madge Concludes That Phil Veritons Has an Able Ally in His Scheme to Abandon Mary from Noel.

I HAD two motives in calling Hank the more obstreperous of Mary's brothers, and sending him to tell her that the Veritons had arrived. The errand was but a pretense, for she already knew of their arrival, but necessary because I did not wish anyone to know that she had made any special preparations for seeing them. With loyalty to my husband's winsome niece warming my heart, I did not wish to leave Noel's vicinity for a single instant until Mary should have come down stairs. Avis Arlen's intention to monopolize him publicly was only too apparent. And I also wished to whisper a word of warning to Hank.

It was but a few seconds before he reached me, and I murmured my directions in a tone which could be heard only by himself.

"Tell Mary that the Veritons are here and that I want her to come down. And Hank if you ever want me to do anything for you again, don't make any comment upon Mary's dress or appearance when she comes down. And tell Bill that too without anyone's hearing you, as soon as you get back downstairs."

"Okey," he said. "What about Marion?"

"You won't have to say anything to her. I replied confidently. "She won't say anything."

"Because she's a girl, I suppose," Hank muttered a bit rebelliously, as he departed, and I mentally asked the right kind of girl. "Because she's the right kind of girl," I said to myself, knowing that Marion's beauty to Mary and her innate good taste would keep her from any comment which would furnish ammunition to Avis Arlen.

For deep within me stirred the intuitive knowledge that Philip Veritons had an able and determined ally in Avis Arlen, for his scheme to alienate Mary from Noel which I suspected while I kept up a perfunctory exchange of banalities with Noel who I knew was paying little attention to what I was saying. I watched the girl at the other end of the room, mentally noting her points of attraction, as the second of a duet might go over the advantages of his friend's opponent.

A tall, slender blonde, I said to myself, she flushed as I remembered that the same appellation frequently had been given me. But she is a different sort of fairness, the kind that goes with the dark gold hair which Dicky is pleased to call "Titan." This girl's skin was so white that I felt instinctively if it were not enhanced with cosmetics, put on with a practiced hand, it would betray the bluish white pallor which goes with ill health. But it was so artfully added that one had the impression of apple blossom time in Normandy. "Well, roses in June," and all the rest of the similes.

Summing up Avis

more attractive.

I shot a furious glance at Noel. Yes, he also was sending an occasional glance in her direction, although for the most part was watching the staircase down which he knew Mary would probably come. That he was distrustful, with nerves on edge, I saw clearly, and wondered what had been the history of those days of idyllic summer traveling during which this girl had acted the role of absorbed auditor to Noel's reading of "The poetry book," which was the object of Mary's edged ridicule.

And then, Noel stirred abruptly, and took a step toward the hall.

"There she is, now!" he said, as Mary came rapidly down the stairs. Copyright, 1931, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

MAY CUT PROGRAM

Reduction in State Budget To Be Felt in Health Program.

MT. GILEAD, June 24—How the expected slash in the appropriations for state health work will affect the local department of health has not been definitely determined at this time, Dr. R. L. Pierce said today.

The commissioner said that he has no reason to believe that the state appropriation will not be forthcoming for the department here as in other years but that officials of the state department have announced a drastic cut in the appropriations for the extension work.

The local department receives $2,000 annually but the amount actually received in 1930 was only $1,740. Morrow county will probably be without any of the health clinic which were held in the county during the last few years. This work will be practically eliminated by the expected cut in the appropriation for the state department.

RULES OF STATE FAIR ISSUED BY GUTHRY

Accompanied by Statement from Governor Telling of Progress.

By The Associated Press COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—The eighty-first Ohio State fair and industrial exposition will be held at the state fairgrounds in Columbus from Aug. 31 to Sept. 5. Rules governing awards of prizes have just been issued by the state department of agriculture through I. S. Guthrie, director, and Charles M. Beer, assistant director and fair manager.

Speaking of the coming fair, Governor George White said: "The Ohio state fair will this year celebrate the eighty-first anniversary of its organization. Beginning in a modest way, it has grown under the nurture of the agricultural department of the state until it is today one of the best in the country."

"It must continue, however, to be a fair that is along the line of development for our agricultural interests including not only the material of the soil, but the fruit of our trees and the growth of our animal husbandry. It is the one place where agriculture reigns supreme and receives its greatest appreciation."

"Although agriculture is the oldest industry it is ever taking on new methods and doing greater things. It is at the fair that we see the great progress being made along this line."

Director Guthrie said the 1931 fair will maintain as its foundation the principles on which it was organized in 1851—"The betterment of agricultural conditions, the advancement of industry and a complete exposition of every phase of human endeavor in the state of Ohio."

Calvary lost its first recreation ball game of the season last night but retained its full game lead on top place in the first church league.

The second division Lee Street nine took advantage of an error to hand the league leaders their first upset of the season 2 to 1 in an overtime game. An error in the seventh inning gave Lee Street a run to match the counter put across by Calvary in its half of the frame. Lee Street then scored in the eighth to win the game.

The Trinity Baptist team failed to take advantage of the opportunity to tie Calvary for the league by losing to the Lutherans, 9 to 0. Swamping the Epworth Seniors 13 to 1, St. Mary's advanced to a second place tie with the Baptists. The Saints scored eight runs in the sixth inning.

Epworth No. 1 moved into the winning side of the percentage column for the first time this year by taking the measure of its brother church team, the Bishops, 5 to 3.

Three of the four contests last night were upsets. St. Mary's was the only team to play according to advance dope. Calvary, Trinity Baptist and the Bishops were not expected to take it on the nose. Although the race for the leadership did not change, other teams in the league are taking heart at the defeat of Calvary.

SCENE OF HEAVYWEIGHT FIGHT

MAX SCHMELING

YOUNG STRIBLING

CLEVELAND STADIUM

NEW PLAYMATES FOR FIGHTERS FURNISH PLENTY OF ACTION

Brown Gets to Schmeling's Chin; Cawley Tough for Stribling.

By The Associated Press
CONNEAUT LAKE PARK, Pa., June 24.—Max Schmeling's chin is just another chin to Nattie Brown, San Francisco heavyweight, newest sparring partner for the world's heavyweight champion.

The California heavyweight made his first appearance against Schmeling yesterday, and without exception, their first bristling two rounds was the best of the current training drive. Brown showed up in camp four days ago, broke, but with a desire to trade a few punches.

Brown more than made good, giving the champion his best work-out. He rattled left hooks and right crosses off Schmeling's chin to the delight of 1,000 spectators. Schmeling, a slow starter, warmed up to his work in the second round, and seemed to get Brown's measure.

They say the champion did not unload his real dynamite at any time against Brown, but is certain to do so before the end of the week. Critics are curious to see what will happen, because Brown is considered a capable ring man.

Schmeling plunged into his final week of training yesterday, full of fight and energy. His boxing today may be increased to eight rounds instead of the usual six, especially as trainer Max Machon desires to test the German's speed over the eight-round route.

With the test over, Schmeling will return to the six-round boxing schedule.

By The Associated Press
GEAUGA LAKE, O., June 24.—Bill Stribling has a new heavyweight playmate, a pudgy fellow named Frank Cawley of Wilkes-barre, Pa., and if their first training set is any indication of the kind of workouts to come, the southern challenger for Max Schmeling's heavyweight title is in for a few busy evenings.

Cawley, a boxer with a style faintly reminiscent of the phantom of Philly, hove into camp here for the first time last night and immediately engaged Stribling in a two-round workout. He was fat but he was clever, and Bill discovered immediately that he could not belt Frankie around as he has the less experienced youngsters who have contracted to prepare Stribling for his 15-round match.

INDIANS AND REDS CHALK UP VICTORIES IN DOUBLE HEADERS

Youngsters Star for New York and Washington American League Teams.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Two of the season's outstanding stars in the American league this year are a couple of young players who hardly have been in the circuit long enough to know their way around it. They are Joe Cronin, husky young Washington shortstop, and Ben Chapman of the New York Yankees.

As things stand now, Cronin leads the league in batting in runs, in the total number of hits made and in clutching triples. He is well up in the batting average, fielding brilliantly and since he is not yet 25 years old, he is still rated as a "comer" rather than an established star. Chapman, only a fair infielder, who batted a little better than .300 last year, also is hitting along with the best and has made a specialty of stealing bases. With no place in the infield for him he has been put in left field to keep him in the lineup.

The Yankee youngster stole three sacks in the second game yesterday as his chief contribution to New York's double victory over the Chicago White Sox. He brought his total for the season to 26, only one less than Charley Gehringer's 1930 total. Chappie also made three hits and batted in four runs as the Yanks won by scores of 8 to 6, and 9 to 4.

Cronin helped Washington take a pair of games from Detroit by hitting three times, batting in four runs and figuring in four double plays. Piling up 18 hits, Washington had an easy time winning the first game 10 to 3, but they played nine scoreless innings in the closing duel between Fred Marberry and George Uhle before batting around in the tenth to score four runs and win 4-0.

The twin victory enabled the Senators to reduce Philadelphia's lead to 2½ games as the Athletics got only an even break with the St. Louis Browns. Bob Grove pitched the champions to a 3 to 0 victory in the first game, shutting out the Browns with two singles to win his thirteenth game of the season, but the Browns, badly outlited, lasted to win the 12-inning second game 5 to 4.

Cleveland stole some of the thunder from the American league leaders, who have been specializing in pitching, by sending out two moundmen who pitched shutout ball against Boston. Clint Brown held the Red Sox to five hits to win the first game 13 to 0, then Willis Hudlin improved on that performance by granting only one hit

THREE AFTER FINAL RYDER TEAM BERTH

Cox, Burke and Wood Make Grade; Others Tied for Fourth Place; To Play British Friday.

By The Associated Press

SCOTCH COUNTRY CLUB, Columbus, O., June 24.—An unbilled act in Sir Walter Hagen's three-ring golf circus is scheduled for Scotio when a trio of Young American pros battle over 18 holes for the tenth and last place on the Ryder cup team that meets the British expeditionary forces Friday and Saturday.

The three who play off today are Henry Cluci of Bridgeport, Conn., Denny Shute of Cleveland, and Frank Walsh of Chicago. These three tied at the end of the 72-hole qualifying round yesterday with scores of 302 and will play 18 holes today to settle the position.

The names of Wiffy Cox, Brooklyn shot maker, Billy Burke of New York and Craig Wood of Buffalo were added to the American team yesterday. Burke led the field with a card of 278 and Cox was second with 282 while Wood trailed by four strokes to pull down third place.

Four other players fell one stroke short of deadlocking the Shute-Walsh-Cluci trio. They were Joe Turnesa of New York, member ### of the last Ryder cup team; Ed Dudley of Wilmington, Del., new western open champion; Willie Klein of New York and Olin Dutra Los Angeles. Al Watrous of Detroit came next with 305 and Charlie Hügendorf, also of Detroit, trailed the pack with 313 strokes.

Burke's score of 289 was four strokes better than that turned in by Bobby Jones over the same course back in 1924 when he won the national open championship.

At the end of 18 holes today the low scorer will be placed on the team in case of another tie between the three, or between two of them, an additional 18 holes will be played.

Brookshire Beaten in Semifinal; Edward Dutt Caddie Champ.

Two matches to determine the winner of the Mar-O-Del membership handicap tournament will be played Thursday and Friday afternoons.

M. M. Mohr entered the finals by defeating Harry Brookshire in a 18-hole match. Mohr did not have a great deal of difficulty in winning after Brookshire got into trouble on two holes of the first nine. After Brookshire's game went pieces, Mohr never gave him chance to recover.

Mohr will play Ed Holt for the course honors. Eighteen holes will be played Thursday and the remainder of the 36 Friday. The championship match previously has been scheduled for Sunday afternoon.

The winner of the match will receive a year's membership in the club and the runnerup a dozen golf balls.

In the caddies' tournament completed this week, Edward Dutt pulled through the final nine-hole round. He turned in a 43 score. The caddies put up a hard fight for the championship and seven 44's, 45's and 46's were carded.

Dr. J. T. Gruber last night met with the ordinance committee of council in the health offices to prepare the ordinance to be submitted to council Monday night. Few changes in the present text of the ordinance are anticipated. The tentative ordinance was drafted by Dr. Gruber after a careful study of meat inspection codes in other cities and after consultation with Dr. H. H. Sparhawk of Akron, a veteran in that city's meat inspection department. The proposed ordinance would protect Marion buyers from inferior or unsatisfactory grades of meat and would insure Marionites against the sale of meat which had not been butchered in sanitary conditions or which had not been properly refrigerated. Development of the code has been a lengthy process which started several months ago.

TWO MORE FALSE ALARMS TURNED IN

Firemen Answer Calls as "Joker" Continues Activities.

The practical joker who was responsible for the fire department answering three false alarms Monday night, continued his activities last night when two more calls were received by the firemen.

At 11:30 p. m. firemen from the central station answered a call from box 44 at Church street and Grand avenue and at 2:15 a. m. the firemen at station No. 3 were called by an alarm from box 23 at Silver and Leader streets.

Both calls were false alarms and officials today were redoubling their efforts to find the person responsible for the calls. Not only is the sending in of a false alarm unfair to the firemen, Chief McFarland said this morning, but it unnecessarily endangers the lives of the firemen as well as others who might be involved in an accident.

SCORN PENNIES

Burglars Break Open Cash Register, But Leave Coppers.

Burglars who scorned the lowly penny, wrecked the cash register in the office at the filling station operated by Phillip Ruhl at 615 east Center street last night. After dropping the cash register on the floor they scorned to pick up more than a hundred one cent pieces that were spilled out.

Empty pop bottles were scattered over the floor and a quantity of candy taken. The proprietor said a check would have to be made before he could determine whether anything had been taken. The intruders gained an entrance to the place by means of a skeleton key.
